

Unpublished Works

Authoritative Teaching in the Church, 100,000 words, prepared for Corpus Christianorum, Washington, as a volume for projected Catholic Theological Dictionary (World Publishing) listed to be published beforehand as an individual volume. (The whole project was abandoned weeks before the publication of this volume after adverse marketing research.) There is a bound copy of the ms. among my papers, and one in the ACU library, Banyo; these copies have an expanded title: Authoritative Teaching: Serving the Believing Community, the Primordial Subject of the Gospel Faith Living in the Church (2005).

The Church's Ideological Crisis, written during study leave, 1975. The essential ideas were incorporated in Sign and Promise. (There is a copy among my books.)

An Introduction to Christopher Dawson's Concept of Cultural History, 2009

“The Irreducible Originality of the Gospel”: The Inspiration of Authentic Christian Faith. This text, written in the early 80s, before I had begun to use a computer, was never published. It obviously needed tidying up; and it was put aside for many years. Looking at it after 2000 I found that, though the references were dated, its essential argument stood up well, and I was disappointed that I had not prepared a revised version for publication. The title refers to a phrase of M.D.Chenu. This text develops several themes that I have made use of in other writings. (June 2014).

Sharing a life journey (an autobiographical essay commenced in 2014)